DATING BACK ALMOST 40 YEARS, all Boxscore charts are based on figures reported to Billboard from a variety of official industry sources, from artist managers and agents to promoters and venue executives.

Reporting is voluntary, and some artists, venues and promoters opt to withhold data from representation on the charts. While final figures for Taylor Swift's The Eras Tour were first published by The New York Times on Dec. 9, show-by-show information has not yet been submitted to Billboard Boxscore for chart eligibility. While that excludes the tour from appearing on the year-end charts, its widely recognized ubiquity is acknowledged throughout Billboard's coverage of the year in touring.

TOP 100 TOURS THROUGH THE YEARS

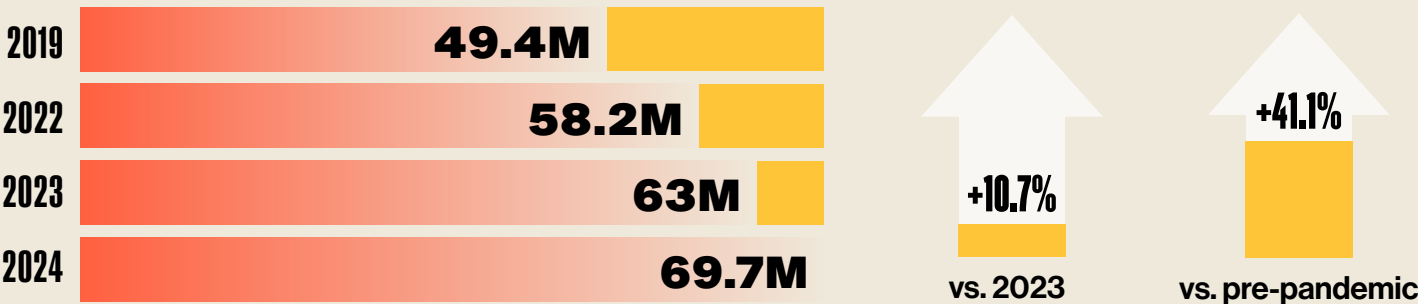

How does 2024's record-breaking performance stack up?

- ▶ 2023's totals were based on an 11-month tracking period. But even if they were recalculated for a full 12 months, 2024 would still post unprecedented revenue and attendance, with earnings up more than 10% from 2023's adjusted gross.
- ▶ Figures for Taylor Swift's The Eras Tour are not included in 2023 or 2024 totals. If her estimated $1 billion in 2024 was accounted for, the year's top 100 tours would register more than $10 billion for the first time.

Top Comedy Tours is more competitive than ever: Jo Koy is No. 10 for the second straight year even though his annual gross doubled to $26 million. Last year, that would've made for a No. 4 rank.

Matt Rife is the youngest act in the top 10, below the average age by more than 20 years.

Country artists hold steady, as Zach Bryan graduates to stadiums and grosses over $300 million.

George Strait earned $125.2 million from just 11 shows. On average, he grossed $11.4 million per show.

- With BTS and Blackpink (and their individual members) off-cycle in 2024, nine-figure grosses weren't achieved. Still, a trio of HYBE groups leads.
- IU is the only soloist in the top 10 of Top K-Pop Tours.

- Pop has been steady in the post-pandemic era, oscillating between 15%-17% of the top 100.
- If Taylor Swift reported figures for The Eras Tour, pop's share of the top 100 would balloon from 16.4% to 27-28%.

Seven artists repeat on Top R&B Tours from last year. The genre's share of the top 100 dips, in large part because one of the artists who does not repeat is Beyoncé, who had 2023's highest-grossing tour.

However, Beyoncé is an anomaly, regardless of genre. R&B is still up 12% when compared with 2022.

2024 was a banner year for women in hip-hop. Nicki Minaj, Doja Cat, Missy Elliott and Megan Thee Stallion all cracked the all-genre top 100. Previously, there had never been more than one female rapper in any given year, dating back to 1991.

Travis Scott posts the biggest year-end gross for a rap artist in Boxscore history.

➡ No one artist has reached the heights of Bad Bunny's 2022. But the bench has never been this deep: Latin artists have a record-high share of the top 100 tours.

➡ Mexico and regional Mexican music makes a major impact, with Luis Miguel topping the list and Peso Pluma and Fuerza Regida selling over 1 million tickets combined.

➡ Rock music was responsible for more than half the earnings of the top 100 tours for 10 of the first 11 years of the 21st century. The still-dominant genre has not cracked the 50% mark since 2017.

➡ All of the year's top 10 rock acts began touring in the 20th century. The most junior acts bookend the top 10, with Coldplay at No. 1 and blink-182 at No. 10.
