Bipartisan Representatives in Partisan Districts

116th Congress First Session (2019)

The lists below show Congressional House members who earned a bipartisan ranking in 2019 (according to The Lugar Center's and McCourt School's Bipartisan Index) but represent strongly partisan districts (according to the 2017 Cook Political Report's Partisan Voter Index). In the Bipartisan Index, a score higher than 0.00 is above the historical average and is considered bipartisan. The 2017 Partisan Voter Index (PVI) determines the partisan composition of each district by comparing the 2016 presidential election outcome in every Congressional district to the national average. Districts with scores of at least D+6 or R+6 are deemed "strongly Democratic" or "strongly Republican," respectively.
